The Institute for Public Health Innovation (IPHI) is a unique non-profit resource that builds partnerships across sectors and cultivates innovative solutions to improve health and well-being for all people and communities throughout the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, particularly those most affected by health inequities. Our work enhances the environments and conditions in which people live, age, work, learn and play; strengthens health service systems and public policy; and builds organizational and community capacity to sustain progress.

Formed in 2009, IPHI is one of 38 member public health institutes within the National Network of Public Health Institutes (NNPHI). Across the country, public health institutes are growing in number and have become an integral part of the nation's public health infrastructure. Public health institutes work in conjunction with a myriad of public and private partners to protect and improve the public's health, adding capacity for a range of functions from workforce training to program development to research and evaluation. The official public health institute serving the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, IPHI has quickly grown into an important partner at the regional, state and local levels.
