Learn how to:

- Respond to a mental health emergency
- Respond to a domestic or family violence emergency
- Explain the importance of communication and field data collection during an emergency
- Research and obtain relevant safety instructions from FEMA during a natural disaster
- Assist with self-care strategies

Sept. 19, 6-7 p.m.

Emergencies can pose various hazards to a community. It is crucial for community health workers (CHWs) to have a framework that can aid clients in reducing their vulnerability to these hazards and coping with disasters. By examining specific hazards that may arise in emergency situations such as mental health, domestic violence, and natural disasters, participants can learn how to prepare for and manage an emergency incident successfully. This course will teach you about the necessary equipment, where to go, and how to keep clients safe.

This training is supported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), together with the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) as part of awards totaling $4,339,895 and $3,000,000, respectively, with 0% financed with non-governmental sources. The contents are those of the author(s) and do not necessarily represent the official views of, nor an endorsement, by CDC, HRSA, HHS, or the U.S. Government.
