WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 10 A.M. TO NOON

When it comes to social or community problems, people who are directly affected have a unique perspective on their needs. This perspective is different from that of politicians or professionals who have only read or written about the issue from an outsider's point of view. To effectively address specific issues, it's crucial to involve those who are directly affected to ensure their needs are met. This training will teach CHWs how to engage with various populations and provide appropriate support.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

- Recognize and understand how bias affects different populations
- Integrate client experiences and voices into health-system interventions
- Understand the CHWs' role in gaining and maintaining trust with various populations

This training is supported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), together with the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) as part of awards totaling $4,339,895 and $3,000,000, respectively, with 0% financed with non-governmental sources.
